Important information

For your family member attending the appointment with you

What happens at a hearing test?

A hearing test is a painless, non-invasive procedure and involves physical examination of outer ears and wearing headphones to hear a variety of sounds in a soundbooth. So, nothing to worry about, but even then, the presence of a loved one gives greater confidence.

Why is it vital for you to attend a hearing test with your family member?

As a family member it is vital that you attend the hearing test too. Your role is invaluable during a hearing test for several reasons. Your family member will feel re-assured and more importantly will help your relative to hear a familiar voice as a demonstration so that they get an accurate and real-life assessment of their hearing.

Your role in attending a hearing test with a family member

Additionally, you know them better than we do and understand their lifestyle too. For example, you might remember to mention that your relative is an avid golfer and we can suggest suitable hearing device technology based on their individual needs.

Your support can help them to discuss and decide what is best for them on the day and to take in all the information we provide. So, it is important that you can attend the hearing test with them or reschedule it to when it is suitable for the both of you.
